Identify how culture, ethnicity and gender influence communication.	Students will observe the presentations of other class members and analyze them for ethical communication skills as well as evidence and logic. They will also record their own speeches and reflect on their own growth as a communicator as well as the impact that their own message delivery had on the audience. Students will consider culture, ethnicity and gender in their analyses.	Students will submit a personal reflection of their own work as well as the presentations of other class members. Reflections will specifically examine the presence of ethical message delivery and the impact of communication choices upon both the speaker and the audience.	This core objective will be assessed by an interdepartmental assessment committee using the Personal Responsibility Rubric.
